

In 1836, the Poinsettia was named in honor of America's first minister, ambassador to Mexico, Dr. Joel Roberts Poinsett. He began growing them in greenhouses in America, from hearing the story of the red flaming plant: 'The green, star-shaped, flowering plant was taken to a manger, by a poor child, to give as a gift; and overnight the green color turned to scarlet red.' It is also used medicinally to break fevers.
